HAWK Nests

On Wednesday, February 15, our school community participated in an advisor/advisee HAWK Nest. The theme of the HAWK Nests focused on kindness. During the HAWK Nest, students watched a video of the book, Somebody Loves you, Mr. Hatch, written by Eileen Spinelli. Following the video, the groups discussed the theme of the book. The HAWK Nest culminated with students complementing one another by passing an imaginary kindness boomerang" back and forth.

Thank You PTO

Thank you to our amazing PTO for providing our staff with a delicious assortment of snacks. Thanks to event organizer Mrs. Cefaratti and everyone who contributed to the event. We appreciate your thoughtfulness.

Thanks to our PTO for continuing to supply books for our book vending machine. Any student completing the library Ten Book Challenge is given a token that enables them to choose a book from the vending machine.

Hot Beverages

As of late we have experienced some spilling issues with students bringing disposable hot beverage cups to school. Please do not send your child to school with hot beverages in disposable cups. Thank you for your cooperation.

REACH classes with Mrs. Bishopric, School Counselor, and Mr. Trane, School Counseling Intern, promote knowledge, attitudes, and skills through instruction in three content areas: academic achievement, career development, and personal/social growth. This year, we meet with all students approximately once per month in the specials rotation to deliver our lessons.

Third Grade

Third Grade students have had a busy year in REACH so far! We began the year with a lesson introducing the School Counseling team at T.I.S. Students learned how to schedule an appointment with a counselor and all about how we are here to help kids manage their big feelings! During the month of October, we learned about how to stop bullying through the Bullying Prevention Unit in the Second Step curriculum. Students watched videos and had lively discussions about how to get help if they see or know about bullying that is happening.

In November, third grade students learned about Friendship by reading the book Enemy Pie, by Derek Munson. We then created a friendship pie and wrote ways we can be a good friend! In January, we had a chance to learn how to express our emotions and resolving conflicts by using the phrase "I feel... when... can you please..." We played a fun game of musical chairs to practice this new strategy. In February, students read the book Carla's Sandwich and talked about the word "diversity." We all made paper sandwiches to highlight what makes us diverse and unique!

Fourth Grade

In fourth grade, we began the year with a review of the counselor's role. We also took some time to write a personal or academic goal that students want to achieve by the end of the school year! Students were excited to think about all they can accomplish by the end of fourth grade. In October, we moved into learning about ways to stop bullying through the second step bullying prevention unit. Students watched videos and practiced reporting and refusing bullying. We then moved into lessons about taking someone else's perspective and how important it is to be able to put yourself in someone else's shoes.

In December, students learned about different conflict resolution styles. They explored how some people resolve conflict like a turtle (avoidance), some resolve like a shark (aggressive) and some resolve it like an owl (problem-solver). We looked at comic strips and had to decide which way the characters were resolving their conflicts. Some students even had a chance to act out their comic strip! In January, students learned about what it feels like to be included and excluded. They created a "statue garden" to show what it might look like if someone feels included or excluded and created posters to show ways to include others in our school. In the month of February, we began exploring the word "diversity" and read a book called The Invisible Boy. Students learned that just because we are different, doesn't make someone bad or wrong. In fact, we can probably learn a lot from someone who is different from us!

Fifth Grade

In fifth grade, we began the year with a review of the counselor's role. We also took some time to write a personal or academic goal that students want to achieve by the end of the school year! Students were excited to think about all they can accomplish by the end of fifth grade. In October, students participated in the Second Step bullying prevention unit lesson of how to recognize and respond to bullying behavior. We had a chance to practice and demonstrate how to report bullying and how to refuse to let bullying happen.

In November, we began learned about stress. Students had a chance to take a stress inventory where they were able to identify sources of stress in their lives. Next, in the month of January, fifth grade students learned about decision making. We explored a simple 4-step decision making model and read examples of how to make an excellent decision. Students worked in groups and demonstrated how to follow the four steps. Finally, we played a Roll Your Future game in which students had a chance to see how their lives may turn out if they leave their futures up to chance!

FROM THE NURSES' OFFICE:

Dear Parent/Guardian,

This year we will conduct a 5th grade Health and Hygiene class with all 5th grade classrooms. Each 5th grade class will participate in a 45-minute lesson between March 9th-24th. The class will consist of a general discussion on overall body health and will NOT be a focused growth and development class. The presentation will be given by our school nurse, Paula Feyerharm, RN.

Highlights of the class will be proper oral care, hand hygiene to reduce the spread of germs, cleaning the body and wearing clean clothes to reduce offensive body odors, and healthy eating and sleeping habits to work on a healthy body and mind. Students will have a chance to do an interactive hand washing activity during this presentation and they will come home with a small bag of hygiene products. They will have an optional at-home to complete if they choose.

If you do not feel your child should participate in this hygiene presentation with their class, please sign and return the form below no later than MARCH 3rd.

This health and hygiene presentation is not the same as a growth and development section which is part of their health curriculum; and this health and hygiene section will not address stages, or changes of puberty.

RETURN TO SCHOOL NURSE

Only return this portion if your child IS NOT going to participate in the Health and Hygiene presentation.

February Reading Thoughts from the TIS Reading Department

7 Reasons Why You MUST Read Aloud To Your Kids At All Ages

Katherine Stone

I believe the fact that I read aloud to my children is the single most important contributing factor to their success in school.

Just reading. Out loud. Every night.

And here's what I want you to know: You should definitely, absolutely, without any question read aloud to your kids. All the time. And not just when they're little.

We are so obsessed with reading in my house that when we went on a Spring Break trip to New York City a couple of years ago we made sure to visit the Scholastic store in addition to the Statue of Liberty. I might as well have Random House Children's Books on speed dial. Barnes & Noble is among the three stores I frequent more than any other, and the vast majority of the money I spend there is on children's books. In fact, I am so in love with reading that I want to make sure other children have things to read, too. Whenever we're done with kids' books at my house we either donate them to the local library or to my children's school's library. At our neighborhood-wide garage sale a few weeks ago, my kids handed out a free children's book to every family that came by with kids.

I have read aloud to my children since they were little, and I continue to do so. I think that's vitally important. I continue to read aloud with my 11-year-old when he's not still buried under homework at bedtime. I won't ever stop reading to him until he says he doesn't want to anymore, and even then I'll probably beg him to let me keep doing it anyway. We read books. We read magazines like Spider and National Geographic Kids for my daughter and National Geographic, the grownup version, for my son. They read on their iPads.

Also, every night I have my daughter read aloud to me for 15 minutes or so before I read to her. She's seven years old, just finishing up first grade, and when she was tested a couple of weeks ago her reading level was at 5th grade. I'm convinced, beyond a doubt, that it's because we make sure that reading is a focus at home and we don't just leave it to the school to make it a priority. All it takes is a few minutes of a parent's time to make a huge difference.

Reading to your kids is about so much more than simply teaching them to read in kindergarten or first grade. Here are seven great reasons why you should be obsessed with reading aloud daily to your children, no matter their age:

1. It's time spent together. Reading time is time when you're focusing on no one else and nothing else but them. It's impossible to read to your kid and look at your smartphone or watch TV at the same time. I read to each of my children separately before bed. This lets me spend quality time with them individually. It makes for a longer bedtime ritual, but I don't care because I love it.

2. It's a conversation starter. Books always give us a reason to talk with each other, even if we don't feel like we have anything to talk about. It keeps communication open.

3. It's a great way to talk about emotional health. We talk about the things that happen in the stories, how we would feel if they happened to us, and how we might deal with such events the same or differently. Books have helped me broach topics that I might not have thought to raise if it weren't for the subject matter in the story.

4. It's a great way to honor the individuality in your children. I read different things to my daughter than I do to my son. We go to the bookstore and they pick out books about topics about which they are interested. Through paying attention to what they want to read, I can learn more about what their likes and dislikes are, including what they might want to be when they grow up.

5. You can open up new worlds for your kids. Reading allows you to introduce your kids to things that their school curriculum just doesn't have the time or perhaps even the interest to cover. My 6th grader has recently expressed an interest in industrial design, so I'm on a hunt for cool books about the design of cars and about architecture. Dear publishers: Please publish more books for young readers about these things!! We don't just need stories about zombies and vampires.

6. You get a wealth of information on where your children might need help. Through reading aloud to my children I've been able to teach them the meaning of words they still didn't understand. They have better vocabularies. They have better comprehension skills and understanding of abstract concepts. And reading allows them to excel not just in language arts, but in all of their subjects. I've been able to see when my daughter was ready to read on her own — she started pushing me out of the way and reading the words herself — and also to see if and when she needs help.

7. It can lead to a lifelong love of reading in your kids. If you do it right, by reading like you mean it — which means getting into the story, changing your voice to reflect what is happening and not droning on like you hate what you're reading — your children will learn to love reading on their own. My 11-year-old has now read more than 25,000 pages in his lifetime. How do I know this? For fun, together we created an Excel spreadsheet (OCD, anyone?) where we record the books he has read and how many pages were in them. He loves that little sheet, because it gives him a sense of accomplishment and he can look back on all that he has read and remember his favorites.

Reading is awesome, and even better, it's accessible to all through our country's public library system. So please, get out there and read to your babies and, most importantly, don't quit.
